A STORY · IN PLATO'S WORDS

Once we were one.

"Zeus split us. Ever since, every soul has been searching for the other half."

— Aristophanes, in Plato's Symposium

CHAPTER ONE · THE PROBLEM

Then modernity split us again.

Same bed. Different timers. Calm, Headspace, Insight Timer — the breakthrough wellness apps of the last decade optimized the individual. The bond — the thing that actually keeps two people alive — was forgotten.

15% shorter lifespan · loneliness (Holt-Lunstad)

↑ paired breathing lifts vagal tone (polyvagal)

0 mainstream apps ship a paired-breath ritual

CHAPTER TWO · THE THREAD

A two-minute thread, every morning.

01 Two phones.

One for each partner. Shared ritual. Local pairing — no cloud accounts.

02 One breath.

Voice-guided in our own voices · EN / DE / JA. Inhale together. Exhale together.

03 Daily by design.

Streaks · Apple Health · Apple Watch. The thread shows up on your wrist.

CHAPTER THREE · THE PRACTICE

Eight years a day.

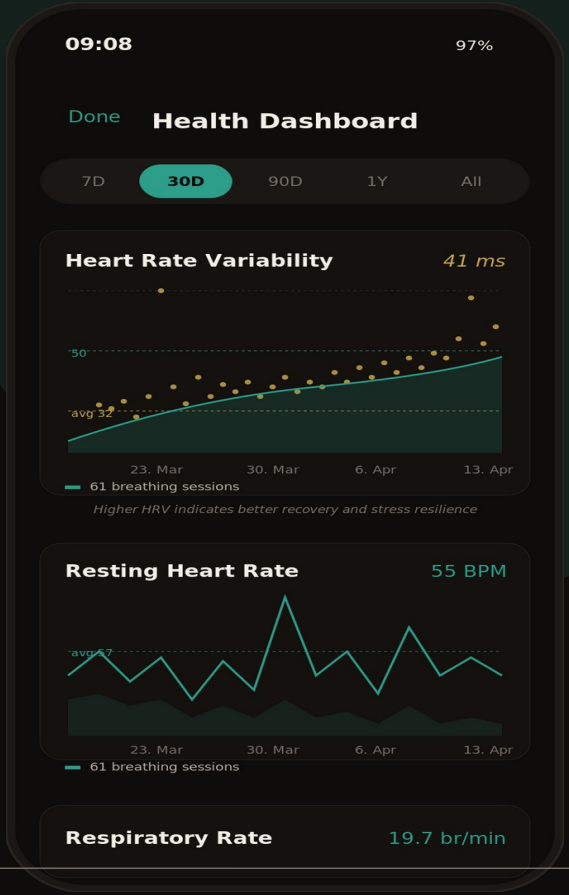
Every morning.
Berlin → Tokyo → Lisbon.
Through three years of distance, two children, and one pandemic.

We didn't research the user. We are the user. The data on the right is ours.



CHAPTER FOUR · THE EVIDENCE

What science already knows.

01 Paired breathing trains the vagus nerve.

Polyvagal science (Porges) — synchronized slow breathing co-regulates two nervous systems. HRV up. Cortisol down. Measurable in two minutes.

02 Strong bonds add years to life.

Holt-Lunstad meta-analysis — chronic loneliness shortens lifespan ~15%. Strong daily connection rivals diet and exercise as a longevity factor.

03 Wellness is a $80B market — for individuals.

Growing ~15% per year (Statista, McKinsey). Couples paired-breath rituals = a category that does not yet exist. The evidence has been waiting for the product.
